

San Diego's Women of Influence 2020

Congratulations to Solomon Ward Seidenwurm & Smith Partner Amanda Harris for being named among San Diego's Women of Influence by San Diego Metro Magazine for 2020.

A certified specialist in Family Law, Amanda is a creative, insightful and compassionate attorney, whose character and expertise in high-stakes conflict resolution has led clients — from celebrities and professional athletes to Fortune 500 executives, small-business owners and their spouses — to seek her legal services as they navigate the complexities of the family court system.

She is a zealous advocate and skillful litigator who pays artful attention to detail and strategy to deliver positive outcomes to clients — ensuring the best future for both her clients and their families.

In a recent client victory, Amanda and the SWSS team represented a professor of medicine at Duke–NUS Medical School through a 12-day Hague Convention trial in federal court and hearings at the state level to successfully protect their client’s parental rights and return the child home. “Amanda’s resilience, creativity, integrity and compassion have served justice and changed our lives,” the client said.

Amanda is passionate about serving the legal community and supporting youth arts programming. Since 2011, Amanda has served in various leadership roles with the Pan Asian Lawyers of San Diego, helping advance the inclusion, promotion and interests of Asian Americans in the legal industry. She is also a member and past Vice President of the Korean American Bar Association of San Diego and a former board member of the San Diego Youth Symphony and Conservatory.
